Executive Summary & State of the Region

OVERVIEW

As the Capital Region emerges from the pandemic, it has become clear that our economic recovery demands more than just reopening businesses and returning to the office. Rather than having to ease into major economic shifts, such as baby boomer retirements and global supply chain disruptions, we now face immediate and unavoidable concerns. Challenges within the workforce underlie many of these post-pandemic concerns and are felt by employers across industries.

In the Capital Region, our economic recovery has been mixed, especially regarding workforce. Compared to other economic development regions in New York, the Capital Region's labor force has been more stable, and we were one of only two regions in the state to grow our population in 2021. And while the Capital Region regained more than 8,000 jobs last year, four times that amount is needed to get us back to our pre-pandemic employment level. We ranked sixth among the Regional Economic Development Councils (REDCs) for annual job growth in 2021.

In our 2021 Strategic Update, the Capital Region Economic Development Council (CREDC) foresaw the need to reach deeper into our urban and rural communities, engage people removed from the labor force, and remove any barriers to their participation in it. For our 2022 Annual Report, the CREDC has prepared a "Regional Workforce Inventory" that builds on our 2021 Strategic Update and highlights the strengths and weaknesses of the Capital Region's workforce. Under our revised "Next-Tech" strategy established in 2021, the CREDC identified several key regional industry clusters on which we should focus our support to further diversify the Capital Region's economy and enhance its resiliency. We declared that the goal of our revised workforce development "Talent" strategy is to ensure employers within Next-Tech's key regional industry clusters have diverse and inclusive pipelines of skilled workers from each of our eight counties. With this Regional Workforce Inventory, we are taking the Next-Tech and Talent strategies to the next level.

Through surveys of Capital Region employers and workers and analysis of labor and job postings data, we have identified the most in-demand skills and high-growth occupations within four priority tradable sectors that cross several of the key regional industry clusters under the Next-Tech strategy. The CREDC's four priority tradable sectors and 17 targeted, in-demand occupations are the following:

Hudson Valley Community College, Troy

1. Tech and Electronics

- Industrial Engineers
- Mechanical Engineers
- Electrical Engineers
- Mechanical Engineering Technicians
- Electrical and Electronics Engineering Technicians

2. Biotech & Life Sciences

- Chemist
- Biological Technicians
- Chemical Technicians
- Life Science Technicians

3. Software-IT/Digital Gaming

- Software Developers, Applications
- Computer Systems Analysts
- Computer User Support Specialists
- Computer Network Support Specialists
- Telecommunications Line Installers and Repairers

4. Cleantech/Offshore Wind

- Welders
- Industrial Mechanics
- Electricians

We have also identified populations for whom training is most needed. This includes populations in what the CREDC identified in last year's new "Magnet" strategy as Magnet communities. Stakeholders and employers both reported seeing untapped potential in the region's urban and rural communities, and the CREDC's Magnet strategy targets both with precision. These Magnet communities include 54 census tracts throughout the region with high concentrations of workers in the leisure and hospitality sector, making them especially vulnerable to economic downturns, whether spurred by a recession or pandemic. Other target populations include neurodivergent workers and other people with disabilities, justice-involved (precisely incarcerated) individuals, disengaged adults and teenaged workers.

To reach these target populations, we also identify wraparound services that will help eliminate traditional barriers to in-demand occupations. The wraparound services the CREDC recommends include: low/no cost management training, low/no cost (or subsidized) success coaching/neurodivergent career coaching, online training, more flexible transportation options serving Magnet communities, childcare access, and childcare affordability.

While our focus in the Regional Workforce Inventory is on tech tradable sectors, we do want to call attention to the fact that the Capital Region's healthcare industry is facing a five-alarm fire. Compared to 2019 levels, the region's hospitals and nursing and residential care facilities were down 4,687 jobs in 2021. Hospitals have been forced to cut services and are often unable to accept hundreds of transfers from smaller hospitals on a monthly basis, leading to uncertain outcomes. In addition, nursing homes are not available for discharged patients due to staffing shortages, resulting in longer and more costly hospital stays.

The regional healthcare industry's most in-demand titles are LPNs, RNs, respiratory techs, lab techs, patient techs and mental/behavioral health specialists. The region lacks enough faculty at nursing schools to meet demand, and the BSN (bachelor's in nursing after 10 years of practice) requirement is placing an enormous financial burden on existing nurses. Grant opportunities should be considered to alleviate some of this financial burden on nurses pursuing a BSN. New York needs to expand public higher education for RN and LPN programs in the region to meet the current and growing demand for care as our population grows older. The state also needs to address bottleneck in processing nurse practitioner applications, which has slowed as RN and LPN application processing have been prioritized.

Entry-level wages for many hospital positions are extremely low, further stressing the healthcare industry. Medicaid rates have not been adjusted in many years, and Medicare rates have not kept pace with inflation, plus Medicare rates were reduced in a federal budget sequestration several years ago. Further, the Northeast region of New York State has suffered from a very low Medicare Wage Index, impacting providers' ability to pay competitive wages. Wage supports and additional employee benefits in the form of free childcare, elder care, transportation or other benefit options could make those positions more attractive for younger new hires. Tuition forgiveness should also be considered for people entering the highest-demand fields in distressed communities. Finally, better coordination between artificial intelligence experts and the healthcare industry could improve efficiency and regulatory compliance by automating some processes to reduce human stress and burnout. The state also needs to be mindful that any mandates that add documentation requirements and liability costs would impede efforts to recruit physicians in New York. Public policy should reduce burdens imposed on physicians and thereby improve patient access to quality care from healthy and focused physicians.

The Capital Region has come a long way over the last two years. We believe our plan will leverage the unique assets our region possesses to drive inclusive economic growth and prosperity. We want as many people as possible to participate in this economy, because when we are all working together we are stronger and smarter.

As always, we deeply appreciate the hard work and commitment of our Council members--and our partners across the region--who continue to support our ongoing progress.

STATE OF THE REGION

Workforce

Workforce is a pain point for employers across the state and the nation. The Capital Region is not immune to labor force pressures, but it has fared better than other regions in the state.

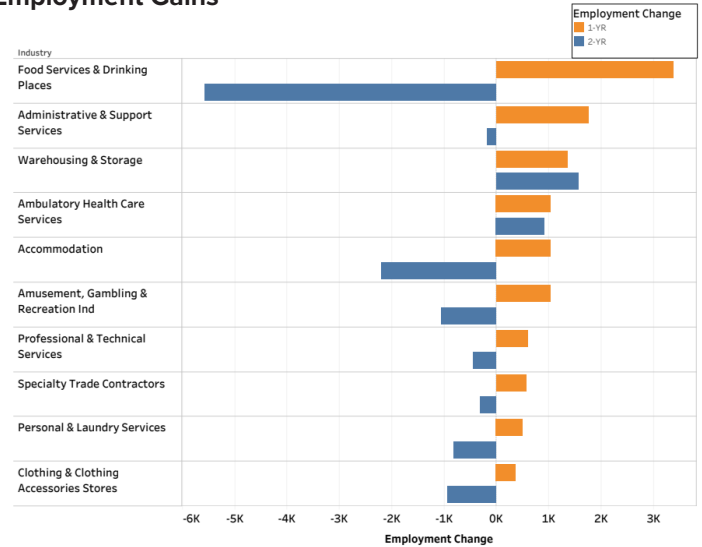

When compared to the pre-COVID statistics of 2019, the Capital Region’s labor force in 2021 contracted by 2.7 percent, or 15,100, to 542,300 workers. Long Island was the only other REDC region with a smaller labor force rate of decline over the two-year period: down 2.6 percent. Annual labor force declines were as steep as 5.9 percent in the New York City region.

In 2021, the Capital Region’s labor force contracted to its smallest average annual size since 2014. Even more, its annual average benefited from strong labor force totals early in 2021 that offset steep declines later in the year. For example, the region’s December 2021 labor force fell to its lowest level for that month in 21 years. That equated to the region having 19,500 fewer workers when compared to the pre-COVID total for the same month. So far in 2022, the region’s labor force is rebounding: by May it was at 553,800 and 1,200 above its pre-COVID (2019) total for that month.

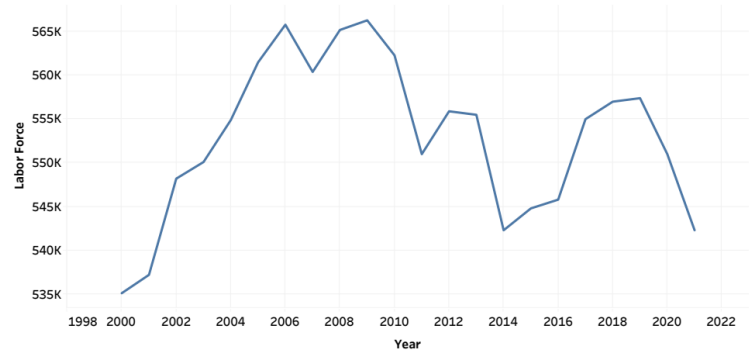

Unlike during the pandemic, when Capital Region unemployment insurance (UI) beneficiaries peaked at 67,300 in May 2020, today there is not a vast pool of unemployed workers waiting to be hired. In May 2022, the region had 5,500 UI beneficiaries – the fewest workers for that month in more than two decades. And those collecting UI benefits are doing so for longer periods on average. In 2019, Capital Region workers’ average duration on unemployment was 15 weeks. In 2021, the average was 17 weeks.

Another factor impacting the size of the region’s labor force is its lower participation rate. By 2020, the Capital Region had a five-year average labor force participation rate of 63.6 percent. That was a decline from the previous five-year period ending in 2015, which had a labor force participation rate of 64.3 percent.

Capital Region Industries with Most 2021 Employment Gains

Capital Region Annual Average Labor Force

The trend of sum of Labor Force (Labor Force) for Year.

Capital Region Unemployment Insurance Beneficiaries

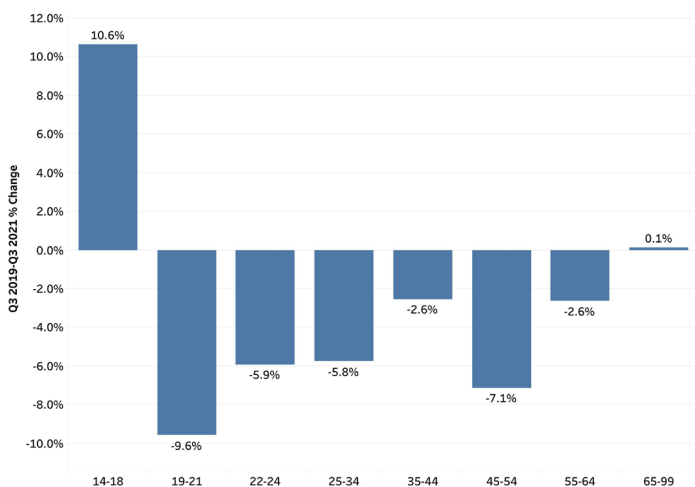

The trend of sum of Beneficiaries for Month/Year Year.

Population trends are favoring the region’s labor force. In 2021, the Capital Region was one of only two economic development regions that gained residents over the year, according to U.S. Census Bureau estimates. As of July 1, 2021, the eight counties had an estimated population of 1,106,274, up 0.1 percent over the year. The Capital Region was the state’s leader for annual net domestic movers; Saratoga County had second biggest gain in annual net domestic movers. Each one of Columbia and Greene counties’ 32 towns and nine villages experienced population growth. Likewise, each of Schenectady County’s five towns grew over the year, as did 17 of Saratoga County’s 19 towns. Three of New York’s top 10 NYS fastest-growing cities were also in the Capital Region: Saratoga Springs, Schenectady and Hudson.

Employment

In 2021, the Capital Region gained 8,134 jobs over the year, but it needs to regain an additional 33,040 to return to its pre-pandemic level. Among New York’s 10 economic development regions, the Capital Region’s all industries employment had the sixth fastest growth rate (1.7 percent), and its private sector had the fourth fastest rate (2.8 percent). As of last summer, workers between 14 and 18 years old and 65 years or older were the only age groups in the Albany-Schenectady-Troy metro area to realize employment gains (10.6 percent and 0.1 percent, respectively), when compared to the same period in 2019.

Albany Metro 14-18 Year Old Summer Employment Growth
Q3 2019 - Q3 2021 Change

Forty-five Capital Region industries last year experienced year-over-year employment growth and 23 were larger in 2021 than they were before the pandemic in 2019. In spring 2021, Capital Region restaurants, bars and caterers received $89 million from the Restaurant Revitalization Fund, which helped the food services and drinking places industry experience the region’s largest annual gain in employment (+3,374). However, this industry also experienced the region’s largest loss, when compared to its pre-pandemic total (-5,563).

Other industries with strong annual employment gains were administrative and support services (+1,756), warehousing and storage (+1,354), ambulatory healthcare services (+1,045) and accommodation (+1,033). After food services and drinking places, the industries with the biggest 2019-2021 employment losses were local government (-4,023), state government (-2,924), and hospitals (-2,627). The healthcare workforce was directly impacted by COVID-19 and suffered very high pandemic-related attrition. The healthcare workforce needs to be rebuilt and restored, not just developed. Retirements appear to have contributed to the public sector losses. For example, in 2021, the New York State Local Retirement System had 3,244 new retirees in the Capital Region, up 313 from the previous year. During the five-year period before COVID, NYSLRS new retiree increases in the Capital Region averaged 74.

Last year, the region had 30,039 employer establishments in all industries. The insurance carriers and related activities industry had the biggest annual gain in employer establishments (+57) and administrative and support services had the biggest annual loss (-74).

Regional Workforce Inventory

PRIORITY REGIONAL TRADABLE SECTORS

In the CREDC's 2021 Strategic Update, the Council shifted from having a project-driven economic development strategy to one that is cluster-driven. Under its Next-Tech strategy, the CREDC identified the following as its key regional tech clusters: 1. Logistics and Distribution; 2. Cleantech (Offshore Wind, Power); 3. R&D to Commercialization; 4. Life Sciences (Drug Manufacturing, Medical Device Manufacturing, Healthcare); 5. Advanced Electronics 6. Software-IT (Digital Gaming); and 7. CRAFT (Creative Arts, Food & Tourism).

The CREDC is including four priority regional tradable sectors as part of its Regional Workforce Inventory. Within each priority regional tradable sector, the CREDC has identified occupations with various levels of minimum educational attainment required for entry-level jobs. These are occupations within the tradable sectors with the most projected net job growth between 2018 and 2028, according to New York State Department of Labor (NYS DOL) estimates.

Using job posting data from Lightcast and NYS DOL as well as feedback from surveyed employers, the CREDC also identified common job titles associated with these in-demand occupations. These job titles were cross referenced with those listed on the careers webpages of major Capital Region employers within each tradable sector. For the identification of occupations within the Cleantech-Offshore Wind Cluster, the CREDC has relied on feedback from manufacturers and workforce development specialists familiar with developments at the Albany ports. While utilities are not categorized under any of the four priority regional tradable sectors, the CREDC is adding them to targeted occupations within the Software-IT Cluster because economic development partners have noted that the growth of computer and information science jobs in rural counties is being stunted by a shortage of workers capable of laying more fiber optic cables.

IN-DEMAND SKILL SET NEEDS

The CREDC used job posting data from Lightcast to identify specialized skills relevant to the most in-demand occupations within the priority regional tradable sector. Listed and highlighted are specialized skills shared across occupations.

Tech and Electronics

The target occupations within this tradable sector are strongly needed in both the Advanced Electronics and Cleantech Power clusters, with an emphasis on skills relating to engineering and engineering technologies. As of 2020, the Albany-Schenectady-Troy metro area's semiconductor and electronic component manufacturing sector employed 3,396 and its other electrical equipment and component manufacturing industry employed 452, according to the U.S. Census Bureau's QWI Explorer. Major employers within this tradable sector include GlobalFoundries, General Electric, Plug Power and Clough Harbour and Associates. The following five target occupations are projected to add a net 480 jobs in the Capital Region to a total 5,990. Driving much of that growth will be GlobalFoundries' Fab 8.2 in Saratoga County, which will create more than 1,000 jobs; and the hydrogen fuel cell manufacturing facility that Plug Power is building in Slingerlands, which will create more than 1,600 jobs.

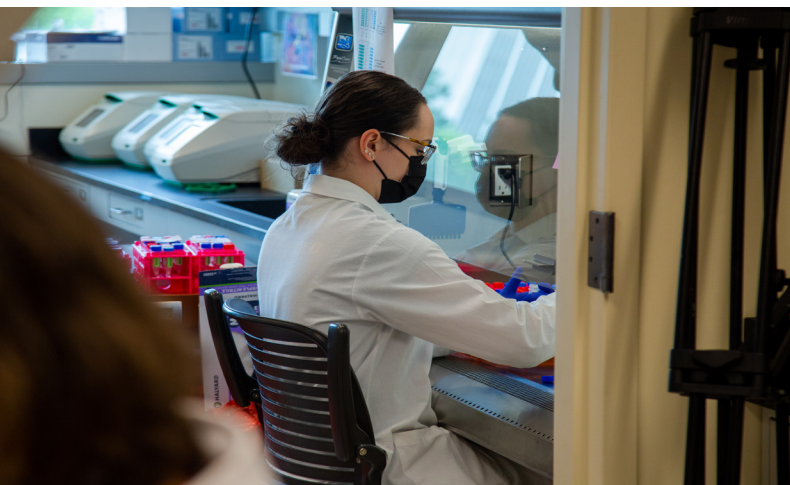

Among the 1,260 engineering degrees awarded in 2020 by Capital Region colleges and universities, almost half (43 percent) were in the targeted fields of mechanical, electrical, and industrial engineering. An additional 185 engineering technologies degrees were awarded in 2020, with 104 at the associate's level, according to the Integrated Postsecondary Education Data System (IPEDS). Even though mechanical engineers are highly sought after within this tradable sector, there are no public university bachelor's degree programs in the Capital Region. There are local mechanical engineering associate's degree programs, but the closest SUNY schools with mechanical engineering bachelor's degree are SUNY New Paltz and SUNY Polytechnic Institute's Utica campus. However, approval of new programs can take years, and in some cases make proposed technology curriculum obsolete before it is even approved.

- Shared Cross-Occupation Specialized Skills: Automation, Process Improvement, Data Analysis, Electrical Engineering, Science Education, AutoCAD, Autodesk Revit, Engineering Design Process, Control Systems, Electrical Systems.
- a. Industrial Engineer: Automation, Manufacturing Processes, New Product Development. Computer Science, Lean Manufacturing, Manufacturing Engineering, Scalability, Process Improvement, Data Analysis, Electrical Engineering
- b. Mechanical Engineer: Mechanical Engineering, Mechanical Systems, Science Education, Project Management, AutoCAD, Autodesk Revit, Heat Exchanger, Software Systems, Electrical Engineering, Continuous Improvement Process
- c. Electrical Engineer: Electrical Engineering, AutoCAD, Engineering Design Process, Control Systems, Electrical Systems, SKM (Power System Software), Autodesk Revit, Automation, Business Development, Project Coordination
- d. Mechanical Engineering Technicians: Security Requirements Analysis, Process Improvement, Environment Health and Safety, Materials Science, Physical Science, Six Sigma Methodology, Data Analysis, Back End of Line, Calibration, Process Engineering
- e. Electrical and Electronics Engineering Technicians: Electrical Engineering, AutoCAD, Engineering Design Process, Autodesk Revit, Electrical Systems, Control Systems, Science Education, Programmable Logic Controllers, Automation, Instrumentation

2. Biotech and Life Sciences

This tradable sector targets occupations serving the drug manufacturing industry within the Capital Region's Life Sciences Cluster. Between 2016 and 2020, employment in the Albany-Schenectady-Troy metro area's pharmaceutical and medicine manufacturing industry has increased by 70 percent to 3,118, according to QWI Explorer data. Major employers include Regeneron Pharmaceuticals and Curia. Regeneron, which has 950,000 square feet of manufacturing, research, office, and warehouse space in East Greenbush, this year has continued construction of a fill/finish facility in the town. Curia is also expanding the manufacturing capacity of its active pharmaceutical ingredient facility in Rensselaer.

The Albany College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences' Stack Family Center for Biopharmaceutical Education and Training (CBET) has also recently partnered with Univercells Technologies, a Belgium biopharmaceutical company, for on-site R&D to commercialization opportunities. ACPHS is also transforming a 154,000-square-foot, state-of-the-art facility adjacent to its campus into a life sciences research building for CBET with over 60,000 square feet of biosafety level (BSL) 2 and BSL-3 research labs. In 2020, Capital Region colleges and universities awarded 648 degrees in biological and biomedical sciences, including 41 in biochemistry. There were an additional 123 degrees awarded in chemical engineering and 130 in chemistry, according to IPEDS data.

- Shared Cross-Occupation Specialized Skills: Chemistry, Good Manufacturing Practices, Biochemical Assays.
  - a. Chemist: Chemistry, Warehousing, Good Manufacturing Practices, High-Performance Liquid Chromatography, Analytical Chemistry, Analytical Techniques, Chemical Hygiene, Pharmaceuticals, Powered Industrial Truck (PIT) Operation, Chromatography
  - b. Biological Technician: Biology, Biomarkers, Good Laboratory Practice (GLP), Phenotyping, Data Analysis, Cell Biology, Biochemical Assays, Molecular Biology, Cell Sorting, Immunology
  - c. Life Science Technicians: Good Manufacturing Practices, Life Sciences, Auditing, Chemistry, Microbiology, Process Improvement, Biochemical Assays, Change Control, Standard Operating Procedure, Laboratory Information Management Systems
  - d. Chemical Technician: Waste Management, Shipping and Receiving, Lock Out / Tag Out, Hazardous Waste Management, Forklift Operation, Analytical Procedures, Good Manufacturing Practices, Calibration, Incident Response, Forklift Truck

3. Software-IT

The four occupations targeted in this cluster present the strongest growth potential and are projected to increase by 1,840 jobs to 11,970 by 2028. Major employers within this cluster include Zones Nfrastructure, Transfinder, Gcom Software, Auto/Mate Dealership Systems, and GreyCastle Security. One industry driving growth in this cluster is the computer systems design and related services industry, which totaled 6,099 jobs in 2021, up 8.3 percent since 2019. Digital gaming is also driving growth within this cluster. The Capital Region has 24 digital gaming studios with more than 500 workers.

Among the region's seven large studios, such as Blizzard Entertainment, WB Games New York and Velan Studios, employment over the last two years has increased by 20.4 percent to 460, according to a Center for Economic Growth survey. In 2020, Capital Region colleges and universities awarded 1,078 degrees in computer and information sciences. Local colleges and universities award many degrees in computer and information sciences relative to the number of openings, yet the region has many unfilled positions in those professions.

- Shared Cross-Occupation Specialized Skills: Computer Science, Agile Methodology, SQL (Programming Language).
- a. Software Developers, Applications: Computer Science, Agile Methodology, Software Engineering, Software Development. Java (Programming Language), SQL (Programming Language), Amazon Web Services, JavaScript (Programming Language), Automation, Application Programming Interface (API)
- b. Computer Systems Analysts: SQL (Programming Language), Agile Methodology, Computer Science, Business Requirements, Systems Analysis, Business Analysis, Business Systems Analysis, Business Process, Workflow Management, Financial Services
- c. Computer User Support Specialists: Help Desk Support, Technical Support, SQL (Programming Language), Operating Systems, Peripheral Devices, Customer Support, Computer Science, Issue Tracking, Active Directory, Computer Hardware
- d. Computer Network Support Specialists: Network Support, Expense Reports, Data Recording, Healthcare Delivery Process, Media Management, Asset Management, Auditing, Billing, Broadcast Operations, Customer Relationship Management
- e. Telecommunications Line Installers and Repairers: Fiber Optics, Fiber Optic Cable, Optical Time-Domain Reflectometer, Splicing, Engineering Documentation, Fusion Splicing

4. Offshore Wind

Albany County is emerging as a component manufacturing hub for offshore wind, with construction of the nation’s first OSW tower manufacturing facility at the Port of Albany and gravity-based foundation work at the Port of Coeymans. Just at these two ports, OSW is projected to support more than 700 jobs. Equinor has partnered with a joint venture of Marmen and Welcon A/S, which will fabricate the OSW wind towers at the Port of Albany. Ørsted and Eversource have also contracted Riggs Distler & Company for the construction of advanced foundation components for wind turbines at the Port of Coeymans.

CanCode Communities, Schenectady

OSW projects are projected to support 550 jobs at the Port of Albany and 230 at the Port of Coeymans. The most in-demand occupations at the ports are also heavily sought after by Capital Region manufacturing and construction companies, such as Phillips Electronics, Fort Miller Company, Callanan Industries and Tradesmen International. In 2020, more than 150 welding degrees and certificates were awarded at Modern Welding School, Hudson Valley Community College and Capital Region BOCES, though some programs operated at reduced capacities due to COVID and are expected to have greater outputs this year.

- Shared Cross-Occupation Specialized Skills: Welding, Machine Operation, Preventive Maintenance, Valves (Piping), Hand Tools, Blueprinting.
- a. Welders: Welding, Machine Operation, Arc Welding, Finger Dexterity, Aluminum Welding, Soft Soldering, Fleet Maintenance Software, Accounting, Oxy-Fuel Welding and Cutting, Beveling
- b. Industrial Mechanics: Machinery, Preventive Maintenance, Welding, Plumbing, Blueprinting, Good Manufacturing Practices, Forklift Truck, Hydraulics, Mechanical Systems, Valves (Piping)
- c. Industrial Electricians: Preventive Maintenance, Electrical Codes, Electrical Equipment, Electrical Systems, Hand Tools, Electrical Wiring. Facility Repair and Maintenance, Blueprinting, Procurement, Electrical Networks

POPULATIONS FOR WORKFORCE TRAINING

In its 2021 Strategic Update, the CREDC adopted its the “Magnet” strategy “to highlight its goal of attracting businesses to communities in need of industry diversification due to their over reliance on leisure and hospitality.” To further this economic diversification, the CREDC wants to target workers in the Capital Region’s 54 “Magnet communities” for workforce training. The populations the CREDC will target for workforce training include the following:

1. Magnet communities: In its 2021 Strategic Update, the CREDC identified Magnet communities, which are census tracts with a percentage of arts, entertainment, and recreation, and accommodation and food services workers is 140% above the regional average. Using 2019 American Community Survey (ACS) five-year estimates, the CREDC found 9.8 percent of Capital Region employees worked in the leisure and hospitality sector, and 54 census tracts merited a Magnet Community designation for having employed worker concentrations significantly above the regional average, or at least 12.8 percent.

These Magnet communities included a third of the 95 Potential Environmental Justice Zones (PEJZs) identified by the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation in 2019. A third (33.6 percent) of the Capital Region’s Blacks and African Americans and nearly a quarter (22.6 percent) of its Hispanics and Latinos live in these 54 Magnet communities. In the Magnet communities, 33.7 percent of Blacks and African Americans and 40.8 percent of Hispanics and Latinos are below the poverty level, compared to 11.7 percent of whites. For its 2022 Regional Workforce Inventory, the CREDC will continue to recognize the 54 Magnet communities based on the 2019 five-year ACS estimates, given the wild fluctuations of employment that are reflected in the 2020 ACS five-year estimates.

NYS DOL industry shift data supports our decision to target Magnet communities. In both 2021 and 2022, accommodation and food services workers increasingly got jobs in other sectors. As did those in retail trade.

Key to realizing this economic diversification strategy, especially through the creation of software-IT firms in rural areas, is the expansion of high-speed broadband in rural areas. To accelerate broadband expansion, the region needs to train more telecommunications equipment installers, such as fiber splicers and linemen.

2. Disabled Workers: The CREDC wants to recruit more disabled adults into the labor force and enhance the skills of unemployed disabled workers, especially those with cognitive difficulties such as anxiety and Autism. We believe this goal can be achieved, in part, by offering them interpersonal communication, conflict management, and skill-specific training in conjunction with on-site job coaching, resource navigation, and other supportive services in targeted occupations of priority regional tradable sectors. Many disabled workers would only be available to work part-time due to the threat of losing benefits. Between 2016 and 2020, the Capital Region had an annual average 126,515 adults with a disability. Among them, only a fifth (22 percent) participated in the labor force, with 24,441 employed and 3,330 unemployed. Among these employed workers in the region’s five largest counties, the most common type of disability was cognitive difficulty (37.8 percent), followed by ambulatory difficulty (27.2 percent), hearing difficulty (25.2 percent) and vision difficulty (22.5 percent), according to American Community Survey data.

3. Teenaged labor force: The talent pipeline, especially for the trades, could be broadened to include more teenaged workers from Capital Region BOCES and Questar III's Youth Apprenticeship Program. The North Colonie School District sent a record number of its graduating class to BOCES this year. As of the third quarter of 2021, 14-18-year-old employment was at 10,287 – up 10.6 percent when compared to its pre-pandemic level. No other age group in the region saw such robust employment growth.
4. Justice-Involved Individuals: Previously incarcerated workers often receive skills training before release. However, they are still marginalized in the job market. In 2020, there were 5,374 adults under probation supervision in the Capital Region. The CREDC sees opportunities in helping connect offshore wind developers with justice-involved individuals who have received training from welding programs provided by the New York State Department of Corrections and Community Supervision (DOCCS) in facilities statewide, including those in Coxsackie and Great Meadow (Comstock).

Most DOCCS welding programs offer certification through the National Center for Construction Education and Research (NCCER). The NCCER curriculum is based on the American Welding Society's standards. DOCCS's Capital Region facilities in Coxsackie and Great Meadow (Comstock) currently do not offer welding certification programs, but they could.

5. Disengaged Adults: Between 2016 and 2020, the Capital Region averaged 325,754 adults 16 and older not in the labor force. That was an increase of 10,048 from the previous five-year period, according to U.S. Census Bureau American Community Survey estimates. Efforts, such as a public service campaign, are needed to reengage these adults and to highlight the mental and societal benefits of work. Given the importance of word-of-mouth and recommendations in hiring, these disengaged workers also need help in broadening their professional networks.

Industry Shift 2022: Last job vs. current search

WRAPAROUND SERVICES

A New York State Department of Labor survey of 415 job seekers and 575 businesses found that that most desired support services sought by employers are childcare assistance (41 percent), transportation assistance (29 percent), education/tuition assistance or reimbursement (21 percent), debt repayment (15 percent) and mental health support (15 percent). Among Capital Region business respondents, percentages were higher than state averages for childcare support services (41-36 percent) and transportation (29-26 percent). Although childcare ranked high among employers as a desired support service, workers identified lack of child/elder care services as one of the lowest barriers to employment, with only 14 percent saying it represents a mild or severe barrier. In contrast, actual or perceived age discrimination was identified as a mild to severe barrier by 44 percent of respondents, lack of the right degree/certification by 40 percent, not large professional network by 39 percent and not enough experience by 36 percent. The services that Capital Region job seekers said would be most helpful to their search were: virtual workshops (36 percent), access to online training courses (34 percent), virtual job fairs (25 percent), and professional network/colleague references (25 percent).

Common themes in the feedback from CREDC workgroups and regional stakeholders included:

- Underrepresentation/inclusion: Cultural and generational conflicts, ranging from diversity concerns to workplace expectations, are factors behind workers leaving some employers.

SUNY Schenectady, Schenectady. Photo: Kris Qua

- Program Approval Process: The program approval process, which currently requires approvals from campuses, SUNY and the State Education Department, needs to be streamlined to ensure the timely rollout of training initiatives. The current program approval process can take up to two years, in part because of a lengthy question-and-answer process. We reiterate our recommendation from the CREDC's 2020 Economic Recovery Strategy to increase alignment between all workforce-related systems. Aligning curriculum and credentials across career and technical education will be important to increasing pathway transparency, connection to labor, and improve responsiveness to critical industry needs.
- Mental health: Anxiety is frequently cited as a reason for the resignation of employees, especially those new to the labor force or early in their careers.
- Management: Managers and human resources specialists are not adequately trained and that contributes to high turnover.
- Drug testing/criminal background: Common deterrents to employment.
- Poor marketing/outreach: Many high school and college students are not aware of job opportunities in their fields of study, and they consequently leave the area. In the Capital Region, there are reported disconnects between biology majors and the biopharmaceutical industry as well as computer science majors and local software-IT firms. Many employers, especially those in the healthcare industry and software industry, noted the challenges of recruiting out-of-state workers into the Capital Region due to negative perceptions of New York State. A marketing campaign to counter negative perceptions would go a long way to help attract new workers throughout upstate New York.
- Insufficient housing: Many employers noted there is not enough housing in the Capital Region to support the level of jobs needed. As of the first quarter of 2022, there were 1,552 homes for sale in the Capital Region, down 47.9 percent from a year earlier.

Given the above insights, the CREDC recommends the following wraparound services:

- Low/no cost management training: New managers and supervision at small to mid-sized firms could receive leadership training with an emphasis on conflict resolution and creating a welcoming workplace.
- Low/no cost (or subsidized) success coaching/ neurodivergent career coaching: Companies hiring lower skilled or neurodivergent workers could pool funds together to retain independent success coaches or neurodivergent career coaches who can assist with issues beyond the scope of human resources and provide resiliency training.
- Online training: Training programs for targeted occupations in priority tradable sectors should incorporate online learning options.
- Magnet commute: To connect workers in Magnet communities with employers in priority tradable sectors, there needs to be expanded bus services in suburban and rural areas and more support for transportation entrepreneurs. This includes infrastructure improvements, such as covered well-lit bus stops, small business loans, and support for rural municipalities to connect and jointly provide cost-effective transportation options to their residents.
- Childcare Access: Help employers and their employees with children more easily find childcare by requiring the New York State Office of Children and Family Services (NYS OCFS) to post datasets with an Application Programming Interface (API) that can be used in company websites and support searches for licensed daycare providers within a radius of an address. These NYS OCFS datasets should also include the number of open slots for each age group, which facilities would need to report to NYS OCFS on a monthly basis. This database should be advertised to ease the burden on childcare providers and improve efficiency.
- Childcare Affordability: Create incentives for employers in an office park or neighborhood to pool funds together to support daycare centers for employees' children.

Public Outreach and Engagement

In addition to convening our industry workgroups, the CREDC, through the ESD Regional Office and with the assistance of the Center for Economic Growth, met with and held follow-up meetings with the following organization types for a more detailed discussion:

- Commercial construction company
- Manufacturing organization
- Labor union
- Recruitment agency
- Nonprofits
- Workforce Development Board
- Community college
- CDTA
- Elected officials
- Four-year university
- Life science industry executives

During the spring, ESD conducted 17 Zoom/in-person meetings with 71 people from 11 county and local governments. The CREDC held one full-council meeting, one on New York's $800 million Small Business Recovery Grant program, and two on DOL's Business and Job Seeker Survey results, together reaching 150 people. ESD staff made an additional 7,000 calls/emails and 495 meetings, reaching 8,420 people.

In addition to collecting the IPEDS data on degree output for targeted occupations (See In-Demand Skills section), the CREDC with NYS DOL's support identified 117 apprenticeship programs in the Capital Region.

Previously Funded CFA Projects

Summary

Through the first 11 REDC rounds, 202 priority projects in the Capital Region have received CFA awards, with 58 percent of them being on schedule or completed. The priority projects have received $178,147,406 in awards that leveraged $1.7 billion in investment.

Since the first REDC round in 2011, there have been 1,067 CFA awards with 82 percent of them being on schedule or completed. These projects received a $524.2 million in CFA awards, which leveraged $2.9 billion in total investment. These CFA projects have also helped create 5,672 jobs in the Capital Region, in addition to helping employers retain 9,157 jobs.
